For two decades, the CRITICISM SERVICE conducted by THE AUTHORS' AID SERVICE has pursued its work of analysing with keen sympathy for the writers' aims, all types of manuscripts which had not found favour before they came into our office. We have demonstrated how, with correct treatment, such manuscripts can be made to find favour. For their skill and keen interest, our Critics have earned—and received—the gratitude of countless authors and writers, including some of our best-known novelists and broadcasters.

Literary Criticism, as we see it, must do very much more than point out—even though it does so with unerring clarity and skill—all the faults a manuscript possesses. It is just as vitally important to know the merits in a manuscript as the faults.

Very definitely YOU want to know how to correct your literary faults or weaknesses, and how to present your work with that magic appeal which is the hallmark of good writing. You want to feel, too, that the Critic who is dealing with your work has a sympathetic interest and understanding of the labour and industry you have translated into your writing. It is not enough to be told bluntly where your work fails: you must know WHY, and HOW to remedy the faults.

The Criticism Service of THE AUTHORS' AID SERVICE embodies all these important factors in its constructive reports. Faults are pin-pointed with penetrating intuition and equal stress is given to literary merit.

Criticism, with that EXTRA SERVICE you need, is given on all types of script:—NOVELS, PLAYS, VERSE, SCENARIOS, TEXT-BOOKS, SHORT STORIES, ARTICLES, B.B.C. FEATURES, etc. Fees are moderate considering the qualifications of the AUTHORS' AID SERVICE Critics. All fees are by quotation. Without any obligation you are invited to send your MSS. for quotation.

WE CAN ALSO HELP YOU IN OTHER WAYS

We will revise your work if it is below standard, or if you are just beginning to find your literary feet. We will help you to finish that novel which is proving difficult in its final stages. We will help you to PLOT your new novel or your short stories. We will help you with markets. WHATEVER YOUR PROBLEM, write to us in confidence. Especial welcome is extended to Overseas and American writers.

First Post-War Edition

FOREWORD.

THE present edition of the AUTHOR'S AND WRITER'S WHO'S WHO is the first to appear since before the war. The earlier editions had established the position of the book as a work of reference for the British journalistic and literary worlds and it was unfortunate that the war with the vast difficulties which it created for all publishers should have intervened to prevent the preparation of a new edition before the present issue.

However, the work has now been completed and we have pleasure in offering a fully revised and reset edition of the AUTHOR'S AND WRITER'S WHO'S WHO to the public. A few words on the aims of the work may be said here.

Briefly, the publication contains two main features. 1. The Who's Who itself, which contains some 15,000 biographies of authors, editors and journalists. 2. The Directory Sections of the work, which need not be detailed here as they are given sufficiently in the Table of Contents. As will be seen from the latter, this part of the book contains a great variety of matter which is of service both to the freelance journalist or solitary writer, and to the staffs of publishing houses and newspaper offices. Every effort has been made in both these main features to include particulars not only of individuals, publications and institutions in Great Britain, but also in the British Commonwealth and, indeed, throughout the world. Some of the Directory sections are not as large as we would wish and suggestions for their expansion are welcomed.

Obviously, such an effort could not succeed in the limitations of space imposed by our supply of paper, but we feel we can fairly claim that the United Kingdom, the great Dominions and the United States of America are well covered as regards biographies of authors and particulars of periodicals, publishers and libraries. In all human work there must be bias and in a book prepared and published in this country it would not be unreasonable to find a larger proportion of information on British writers and periodicals. In fact, without much greater research than time permitted it would have been impossible to include a higher proportion of entries for authors and periodicals outside Great Britain. The fame of an author spreads usually like ripples on a pond and although a prophet is rarely honoured in his own country, it is generally within his country's boundaries that he is best known. Consequently, while we have tried to include British authors of all ranks and types of merit, in the case of non-British writers we have been guided by the voice of international fame.

Unfortunately, in the case of many countries it was impossible to secure the names even of their most distinguished writers, partly through difficulties of language, communications and the time factor ; partly, in certain instances, by the descent of an instrument unknown in happier days outside the realm of the factory and its fire precautions.

Instances will occur among the biographies in which some well-known authors receive very scanty notices. Such treatment is very much against the wish of the Editor but has been imposed upon him by dilatoriness on the part of some in replying to his questionnaires. In certain instances it has been impossible to obtain any information.

Two points should be noted for the assistance of readers, in the list of Literary Obituaries at the end of the book, there are included authors whose entries also appear in the main biographical section but whose deaths occurred after we had gone to press with this part of the book. In the case of publications we have adhered to the rule that only the names of those which are actually in existence at the time of going to press have been given in the book. Publications which it is probable will resume issue in the near future are therefore omitted.

At this stage in the preface the Editor usually acknowledges the assistance given by his various advisers and helpers. As will be apparent from the title page the Editor had the advantage of a distinguished advisory committee. Where so many are distinguished it would be invidious to extend individual thanks to anyone in particular. Accordingly, the Editor thanks all the members of the Advisory Committee for their help which has been given in various ways, in advice, in the form of contributed articles and in suggestions. In no sense are the Advisory Committee responsible for the compilation of the book or any defects or errors which may appear therein. The same remark applies to contributors or advisers other than members of the committee, such as the secretaries of the Institute of Journalists, National Union of Journalists and P.E.N. They are responsible solely for the articles appearing over their names. Otherwise, their advice and suggestions like those of the Advisory Committee, although always welcomed by the Editor, have by no means been uniformly followed by him. A due measure of thanks is given to all those official bodies, organisations, clubs and societies which have been willing to assist by putting the Editor in touch with authors, journalists and publications. The Editor also wishes to acknowledge the ready help given by several Government departments in supplying information concerning those of their activities which have a bearing on the Press, Publicity and Publishing.

The function of advisers is to advise, that of assistants to assist. An adviser can take a detached view, an editorial assistant can rarely do so. Few people, even in the publishing world, can realise the immense detailed work involved in the preparation from day to day of a work of reference. In theory an editor should resemble Admiral Togo; having made his dispositions for victory he should be able to leave them to his subordinates while he goes on a fishing expedition. In practice most editors resemble the old Boy's Own Paper drawing which the present writer saw (without prophetic eye) in his youth: a harassed, balding man seated at an over-laden desk and having the notice "Do It Now" pinned to his back. Seriously, however, an editor to secure success must secure a detachment from ordinary detail in the carrying out of his plans. The measure of assistance which he receives from his staff is the measure of his detachment and ability to direct the general work. The Editor now has the pleasure of doing something more than sympathise (in secret) with his staff. He thanks all his editorial assistants, particularly Mr. R. W. Hart.

REVIEW OF PUBLISHING SINCE 1939

by Edmond Segrave

THE history of British book publishing during the ten years 1939-1948 makes a story equal in its dramatic, not to say melodramatic, proportions to any of the livelier narratives to be found in its own stock-in-trade. It embraces crowding disasters followed by unhopcd-for deliverances, and moves from unconscionable distress to unimagined prosperity.

The year 1939 began with alarms and uncertainties and ended with war, and the book trade, always a sensitive barometer of national preoccupations, responded with its accustomed accuracy. It was in the doldrums. The following year was even worse. The nation, girding itself hurriedly and belatedly for battle, found itself with a thousand things to attend to, of which reading was conspicuously not one. The sales of books in that year were the lowest on record. That year ended with the publishing trade sustaining the worst disaster of its long history. On December 29th, 1940, took place the great incendiary raid on the City of London, and in that conflagration it was the publishers, along with Wren churches and the City livery halls, who were the principal victims. Paternoster Row, Ave Maria Lane and Amen Corner and those other little streets and alleys round St. Paul's Cathedral, in which the British publishing trade had for centuries maintained its traditional centre, were reduced in a night to heaps of smouldering rubble. In that night a score of publishers were made homeless and millions of books were destroyed. This was a body blow; it was not the last. Book printing is a specialised branch of the printing industry and the whole output of British book manufacture depended on about seventy firms. Of these twenty-five were engaged in printing only and sixteen in binding only; the rest did both printing and binding. By the summer of 1941 nearly a third of these firms had either been totally destroyed or seriously damaged by enemy action, while others had had their premises requisitioned to an extensive degree. Then, following the German occupation of Scandinavia, came paper rationing in its most acute form. When, in 1941, Dr. Goebbels said that the British book trade had been destroyed beyond hope of resurrection, there were some, even at home, who feared that for once he might be right.

Actually the recovery had already begun when things looked their blackest. The tale of the book trade recovery can best be conveyed by the following figures showing the volume of business done in the years 1938-1947:

| Year | | Total | Export |
|-------------|-------|--------------|---------------|
| 1938 | | £10,706,018 | £3,171,018 |
| 1939 | | £10,321,658 | £3,154,599 |
| 1940 | | £ 9,953,196 | £3,517,335 |
| 1941 | | £13,986,700 | £3,983,900 |
| 1942 | | £16,735,900 | £3,608,700 |
| 1943 | | £19,290,800 | £4,469,600 |
| 1944 | | £20,500,516 | £4,895,349 |
| 1945 | | £21,979,554 | £5,139,222 |
| 1946 | | £26,961,622 | £6,715,212 |
| 1947 | | £30,203,763 | £7,412,905 |

The recovery was due to the demand for books which in 1941 began to be increasingly insistent; books for instruction, books for entertainment, books for the men and women serving in the Forces and for civilians. Publishers put forth every effort to meet the demand, or, so it seemed, a dozen conflicting demands. The fighting man's hunger for books, both for recreation and instruction, was on several occasions eloquently expressed by the Prime Minister in appeals to the public for books. The workers in the factories required urgent supplies of technological books on an ever expanding diversity of subjects. All the services had their special requirements in the way of training manuals. Meanwhile, for the general public, reading was found to be the one relaxation which the increasing strain and deprivations of war permitted. The bookshop was discovered to be one of the few remaining places where it was possible to buy a birthday or Christmas present and many people entered it for the first time for that reason.

The result was a boom in books that had never been seen before. There also ensued what the book trade had never previously known, a book shortage. By 1942 the Publishers Association had published statistics showing that more than 37,000 titles, which in the ordinary course of events would be kept in print, were unobtainable. Replacement was out of the question, publishers by this time being limited to a paper ration of 37½ per cent. of their consumption in 1939, which it will be remembered was a bad year. As time went on more and more books went out of print. In order to make the most of their meagre supplies of paper and other materials the publishers adopted a wartime economy agreement. Paper became thinner, print smaller and margins narrower. Books shrank to half their former bulk. Some publishers managed, despite these restrictions and austerities, to retain a certain stylishness of production; others were markedly less successful.

Before long it became clear to everyone that a book that did not find a willing purchaser would have to be a very peculiar book indeed. Nor is it surprising that there were publishers, whose number was speedily enlarged by new entrants to the trade, who were prepared to exploit this golden opportunity for all it was worth. Rather is it to be remembered to the trade's lasting credit that publishers as a whole comported themselves so admirably. Not only did the better book publishers maintain their equilibrium, but in addition to satisfying every immediate varying demand continued to maintain the highest traditions of their calling. The years 1941 and 1942 saw the beginning of a flood of rubbish that may have made its producers quickly rich, but those years also saw the publication of many valuable works. The "Oxford Dictionary of Quotations" appeared in 1941; so did the third edition of the "Oxford Companion to Music." 1942 saw the publication of Dorothy Wordsworth's Journals, definitive editions of Swift and Pope, together with a crop of biographies and autobiographies that belong already by natural right to the shelves of permanent books. Indeed many books that may have been regarded in normal times as appealing only to the bookman or the scholar were the ones which the ordinary public now began to demand in great quantities. A striking example was provided by Trevelyan's "English Social History." It is true that a book by the Master of Trinity is something of an event; even so, it cannot be said to be everybody's book, and both its subject and its price (a guinea) might have been expected to limit its appeal. The book was completed in 1940 and was first published in America, but owing to the paper shortage its publication in this country was held up until 1944. The first British edition consisted of 16,000 copies, which by normal pre-war standards was a fairly big one for such a book. Every copy was sold in a single day, and two days later the booksellers were reporting lists of customers waiting for further supplies. It has since sold upwards of a quarter of a million copies.

The shortage of books became progressively more acute throughout the war and, indeed, still persists to-day. But now the position is complicated and to a certain extent paradoxical. On the one hand the shortage of technical books and of educational books of all kinds remains extremely severe. In 1947 a letter was published in the "Times," signed by the Vice-Chancellor of Cambridge University and the heads of colleges, appealing to all former Cambridge students to relieve the book famine at the University by lending or selling to their old colleges such textbooks and standard works as they might still possess and could spare. Oxford University also made a similar appeal. The significant thing in these appeals was the evidence they provided that their writers found no reason to expect that the ordinary sources of supply would be functioning adequately for some considerable time to come. This shortage of books extends over the whole field of education. "I quite appreciate the difficulty as regards the shortage of books," said Sir Stafford Cripps, then President of the Board of Trade, in the House of Commons in 1947, "and the only thing to do is to borrow one if one cannot buy one."

On the other hand, the bookshops, as anyone visiting them can see for himself, appear to be full of books. Indeed, most booksellers would declare that they have now more books in stock than the public wants to buy, and they look with apprehension at shelves becoming increasingly loaded with dubious stock. This appearance of plenty, however, is illusory, as the seeker after dictionaries, classics, and reprints of standards works will quickly discover. As one bookseller put it, "To judge by the bookshops of Britain to-day there is no such book as the 'Concise Oxford Dictionary', since fresh stocks of books of this kind are bought eagerly as soon as they appear in the shops. Such books form the bread and butter of the book trade and there is as yet no sign of a sufficiency. On the contrary, it will be years before the publishers of such series as Everyman's Library and the World's Classics will be able to satisfy the demand. For some time to come every long-established publisher will be occupied in the task of making his list operative again, for it is by the size and strength of his back list that a publisher's stature and fortune are measured. Most publishers of standing will have a full programme here, since most writers shared the experience of Mr. J. B. Priestley who stated that "during most of war time every book I had written was out of print and unobtainable." Now, week by week, these books by the public's favourite authors are gradually returning to the bookshops and find a ready sale.

But every publisher knows that he cannot live for ever on his past, and that the back list of to-morrow depends on his successful judgment in publishing new books to-day. Here the situation is unsatisfactory, for it is the new books by new authors, particularly in the field of creative literature, that are not doing well to-day. This inflicts a further hardship upon the young author who, in all conscience, has had a hard time during the past ten years. During the years of acute paper shortage he had great difficulty in getting published at all, at any rate by any publisher of standing, since such publishers were then at their wits' end to know how to spread their meagre material resources over their accumulated commitments. "Nobody knows how much is lost because it may never come to light," said a speaker during one of the House of Commons debates on book shortages, and a leading literary agent, writing with a life time's experience, declared in 1947: "If a similar state of affairs had existed after the first world war, more than half the English authors who are now famous would never have become writers."

Now that the manufacturing position is a little easier, the new author is getting his share of paper and print, only to find, in most cases, that the golden day has faded into a chilly twilight. No longer does a book, just because it is a book, find a purchaser. Nowadays a customer in a bookshop looks long and hard at a new book before he buys it, but more often he neither looks nor buys. There are several reasons for this. One is that the public, confirmed after years of shortage in the belief that good books are difficult to obtain, has not yet realised that new books are once more available again. The customer in the bookshop to-day, able to choose between the old proved favourites that have been out of print for years, and untried newcomers, has no hesitation in making his choice. He puts his money, which is not as unlimited as some economists would have us believe, on the safer bet. It may be, of course, that the new books are not as good as they used to be, but then, like Punch, they never were. A common complaint heard to-day is that so few of the new books are "outstanding," but this is only another way of saying that they have not yet made a reputation. How can they? The space allotted to book reviews in to-day's attenuated newspapers is severely restricted, and reviewers, compelled to be selective, are naturally inclined to devote such space as they have to those books which they judge to be the most important ones. Advertising space is equally limited, and the new author is unusually favoured who receives for his work more than a modest announcement, in one newspaper, once. This lack of publicity is one of the features of the contemporary literary scene that are causing publishers most concern to-day.

If these conditions are hard on the new author, they are also proving something of a trial for the new publishers who, during the war, multiplied themselves at an unprecedented rate. Since 1942 there has hardly been a week that has not seen the registration of one or more new publishing companies; indeed, one of the oddest things about wartime publishing was the constant stream of new recruits to an industry bereft of raw materials. The explanation is to be found in what was one of the most curious anomalies of wartime trading in Britain. While the book publisher who was established before 1939 was—and still is—rigidly limited to a percentage of the paper he used in that year, any other person in this country was, and is, at liberty to start a publishing business and use for books all the paper he can persuade a printer to supply him with. Some of these new entrants to publishing are real publishers in intention and achievement. Others are not, and, as the Publishers Association's annual report for 1947 sardonically observed: "It is rumoured that some of those who volunteered during the war to take a hand in the work of providing books for the public feel that their task is accomplished and are seeking other ways of helping the national economy along".

OFFICIAL WAR BOOKS

For the following information we are indebted to the Central Office of Information, which supplied the necessary facts and figures, and to which acknowledgment is now made.

IN March, 1941, publishing history was made by the appearance of the first of the British Government's Official War Books, designed to appeal not only to the "book buying" public but to everybody, and to tell in a clear and easily assimilated manner the story of Britain's war effort and achievements on sea, land, and in the air. How successful this project was can be realised when it is mentioned that the aggregate sales of these books or campaign narratives exceeded 30,000,000 copies in the United Kingdom. In all some 40 of these books were published between March, 1941, and October, 1946; some of the more important together with their U.K. circulation figures being:—"The Battle of Britain" (4,350,000); "Bomber Command" (1,360,000); "Front Line" (1,983,280); "Coastal Command" (1,197,000); "The Battle of Egypt" (1,507,000); "East of Malta, West of Suez" (1,129,800); "Combined Operations" (1,423,120); "Fleet Air Arm" (1,199,620); and "The Eighth Army" (1,500,000).

These phenomenal figures—there has been nothing like them before or since in this or any other country—were due to extraordinary circumstances. The subjects chosen were both important and interesting, the accounts being official and authoritative. But over and above this a most systematic and deliberate effort was made to produce the kind of book that would appeal to the greatest number of the general public.

Texts were often drastically rearranged to this end, and part and chapter headings were altered over and over again until they were right. Pains-takingly prepared maps and diagrams were used freely. Above all, the books were packed with the most dramatic and arresting photographs; days were spent in arranging layouts, and captions were weighed and considered to the last word. Finally, the formats were chosen, firstly to give the pictures a full run, and secondly to make a cheap price possible. Standard quarto was the classic size, and one shilling an average price. "Front Line" was the dearest book published. It cost two shillings. Since it sold almost 2,000,000 copies, it meant that the public paid in all £200,000 on it.

Usually the books were produced in this country but quite often by publishers overseas, in many foreign languages as well. All were published by the Stationery Office and were Crown Copyright; most of the authors at the time of writing being Government servants. Hilary Saunders was the genius, of course. He wrote "The Battle of Britain," "Bomber Command," "Bomber Command Continues," "Coastal Command," "Combined Operations," and others. "Bartimeus" was the outstanding naval writer. Other authors included Dudley Barker, Colin Coote, Owen Rutter, and V. S. Pritchett.

All the books were edited, illustrated and designed by Publications Division of the Ministry of Information, of which J. M. Parrish and Robert Fraser were Directors. If any two men are entitled to the credit for this achievement, they are Parrish, who created the prototype design in "Bomber Command," and Saunders, who wrote the text. ("The Battle of Britain" was a bit of a freak sale. "Bomber Command" was really the father of the series.) Next prize should go to Charles Lamb, the art editor.

In addition to these forty or so books of action, Publications Division prepared another twenty or so for official publication on home front subjects— income tax, health, make-do and mend, manpower, etc. The sales of these came to about 10,000,000. So about five or six years publishing saw about sixty books issued with an aggregate sale in their U.K. editions of around forty millions.

CAN SCIENCE HELP . . . ?

Well, surely . . . as Dr. Joad would say . . . it depends on the science. There are two kinds of science: quantitative and qualitative. We have never claimed that fiction-writing has been reduced to an exact or quantitative science and we cannot imagine how decimals or set-squares could be applied to it. The Science of Fiction-writing is qualitative—a science in the same category as, for example, Domestic Science, Eugenics, and Psychology.

"The subject matter of Lecture 1 is truly amazing, and no novice would credit that the devising of a plot, which before had seemed such an intricate process, could be reduced to such a simple scientific formula."—R. E.

"This makes a total of 13 stories sold in 1945; money received from same, £81 19s. 3d. That is good, considering I had sold no fiction in 1944."—R. G. F.

"I sent the story to the GIRL'S OWN PAPER and got two surprises. It was accepted first time out for £6 6s. . . . splendid payment for a 2,000 word children's story. The second surprise was a most encouraging letter asking for as many more of the same type as I care to submit." (Later): "May I say how glad I am that the further girl's story sold first time out to G.O.P. There we are then, all square on the course fees with a couple of guineas left over!"—W. L. J.

"I confess it was with the utmost scepticism that I sent my short story, 'He Went to Harley Street,' to CHAMBERS'S JOURNAL as you advised. It seemed to me that we were aiming rather high. I am delighted to tell you that it has been accepted."—Dr. E. G.

"I have great pleasure in informing you that as a result of careful study of Lectures 2 and 3 two child stories I have written have been accepted by RADIO EIREANN for broadcasting."—B. J. O.

"Please accept my warmest thanks for the cheque for £18 9s. 8d., received today in respect of your excellent sale of 'The Constant Heart' to BLACKWOOD'S MAGAZINE."—D. M.

"The editor of WOMAN'S ILLUSTRATED has offered me six guineas for 'Through Susan's Eyes' and says it is an excellent story. That is the fourth story I've sold since starting the course." (Later): "I was rather pleased to be asked by the editress of WOMAN'S COMPANION to write a series of six short stories about children for her paper." (Later): "I was very pleased to hear that I had sold a story to PSYCHOLOGY last week."—Mrs. P. M.

"Through my letterbox came a slim envelope. . . . 'Dear Sir, We like your story 'Witch Child' very much and will be glad to offer you ten guineas for it for use in ARGOSY.'"—K. C. S.

"Three more acceptances. This makes £14 10s. in eleven weeks." (Later): "Last month's receipts alone amounted to £40 15s. This means that after completing six lessons with you I have earned £70."—J. W.

"The System is better than any other I have ever heard of, especially the method of Stages, which gives one the confidence of knowing what to do, and how to do it. There is something to guide one, something tangible for one to hold on to."—O. W. C.

Remember, we apply scientific principles even to ourselves: we take the Course fee PLUS 10 per cent of your sales, thus ENSURING our maximum efforts on your behalf. Read all about our System in "The Professional Touch," to be had free from Dept. 43.

GENERAL ARTICLES

THE INSTITUTE OF JOURNALISTS

By Stewart Nicholson, General Secretary

THE Institute of Journalists is the senior organisation of the profession, incorporated by Royal Charter in 1890. It had its origin in the National Association of Journalists, which was founded in 1884 and converted into the Institute in 1889. Its primary object, as set forth in the Charter, is "the promotion by all reasonable means of the interests of journalists and journalism."

Representing the profession as a whole, the Institute is administered on thoroughly democratic lines. No distinction is made between the editor of a great daily newspaper and a reporter on a country weekly. Women are admitted to membership on exactly the same conditions as men.

Members of the Institute are definitely given a professional status by the Royal Charter of Incorporation. The Institute has no political entanglements, concerning itself exclusively with the well-being of the journalist and the advancement of the profession. Only when those interests are affected does it take action in political or legislative matters, and when it does, its status as a Chartered professional organisation lends special authority to its representations.

Its governing body is the Council, which is elected by geographical districts on a basis of one representative for each fifty members. The Council elects its own Executive, which meets frequently and carries on the detailed work of administration, as well as other special committees. A general meeting of members, known as the Conference, is held annually and this gathering elects the President and other honorary officers.

The Institute is a certificated Trade Union and, as such, is fully recognised as a negotiating body on salaries and working conditions. This all-important side of the Institute's activities is wholly controlled by an autonomous body known as the Salaries and Conditions Board, which is responsible for the management of all affairs affecting members who are not in any capacity able to exercise the powers of an employer. These members constitute approximately 95 per cent of the total Institute membership. Today the Institute holds agreements on salaries and working conditions with all the principal proprietorial societies.

The Institute has long maintained an Employment Register for the service of its members. Its selective policy in nominating members for appointments has earned for it a high reputation among those who engage staffs, and they are very ready to report vacancies. Further, it has links with journalistic bodies in other parts of the Commonwealth, valuable to members who wish to serve overseas. There are specialised sections for free-lances and for trade and technical journalists.

Behind every Institute member stand considerable accumulated funds. Thanks to a low rate of unemployment among its members the Institute has long been able to maintain a generous scale of unemployment benefit. The full rate of benefit is now £2 10s. for the first thirteen weeks and £1 1s. for a further thirteen weeks. Members of five years' standing may also have benefit extended, provided a maximum of thirty-two weeks is not exceeded. Junior members are eligible for benefit at half these rates.

The Benevolent Fund is able to help in a wide range of personal misfortunes. The Orphan Fund, of which Queen Mary is patron, has a capital of £49,000 and has assisted in the upbringing and education (up to University graduation in some instances) of many hundreds of children of its former members. The Convalescent Fund is the only one of its kind. Funds exist to assist widows, to help sick and aged journalists and to provide voluntary pensions for those who, through age or incapacity, are no longer able to follow their profession.

Free legal assistance is provided for members in matters relating to their professional activities. The Institute has, since its formation, succeeded in building up a regular "practice of the profession," which is adhered to in the absence of agreements to the contrary entered into by its members, and a large number of successful actions have been fought in the courts on their behalf.

One big claim that can be made for the advantage of Institute membership lies in the friendship and good-fellowship created by the common interests of a mutual association. Membership of the Institute means that the journalist has a powerful instrument to guard and promote his material interests, that the call of necessity will never go unheeded, and that there are constantly at hand resources of knowledge and experience in matters of perplexity or difficulty.

All the services enumerated above, and others, are covered by the annual subscription of 3 guineas.

INTERNATIONAL ORGANISATION OF JOURNALISTS

THE International Organisation of Journalists was created at the International Congress of Journalists held at Copenhagen in June, 1946. Its formation followed the voluntary dissolution of the Fédération Internationale des Journalistes and the International Federation of Journalists of Allied or Free Countries; the last-mentioned organisation having for the previous five years carried on the idea of international co-operation of democratic journalists.

At the opening congress a membership of organisations in participant countries totalled 130,000 journalists; subsequent congresses are to be held every two years commencing in 1947.

The aims and objects are the protection by all means of all liberty of the press and journalism, the defence of the people's right to be informed honestly and accurately. The promotion of international friendship and understanding through free interchange of information and the promotion of trade unionism amongst journalists in any nation where organisation does not exist. Any one national organisation claiming to represent working journalists subscribing to trade union principles and accepting the principle of the liberty of the press is eligible for affiliation; in the event of more than one organisation claiming to so represent the journalists of any one country, then the executive committee of the I.O.J. shall decide, which, if any, shall be admitted, subject to the decision of the succeeding congress; each affiliated organisation being allowed one representative on the Executive Committee.

THE NATIONAL UNION OF JOURNALISTS

By C. J. Bundock, General Secretary

FORTY years ago the need for a trade union for journalists was apparent. A Union was formed in 1907—the National Union of Journalists—and the tremendous task of building an effective organisation began. The individualistic nature of the journalist's work did not help him to see the necessity of unity within a trade union to secure an adequate recognition of his services.

A great work of organising had to be done before any results in improved conditions could be shown. The pioneers of the Union had to "sell" the idea of the Union to their colleagues throughout the country with nothing in the shop window. There were no funds, so no inducement of unemployment benefit or other benefits could be offered. There were no agreements because organisation must be successful before recognition is achieved.

The pioneers could offer nothing but their own tremendous enthusiasm and their invincible faith. Those qualities worked wonders.

The creators of the Union, men who had won for themselves good positions in journalism and were the least likely to require the support of any organisation, gave freely of their time and leisure. They were alive to the discomforts of the general body of their colleagues and appreciated the need for a strong trade union enjoying all the legal privileges of a trade union.

Rapidly the Union rose to a position of authority. Its growth astonished even its creators. Taking hold in the big towns, the Union idea spread swiftly through the country to the remote rural areas.

Within ten years the N.U.J. was recognised by the newspaper proprietors as the body authorised to speak for working journalists in the negotiation of wages and conditions.

In 1913 many qualified reporters were getting less than 30s. a week, and the average pay of provincial reporters and sub-editors was not more than 35s. a week. It was by no means unusual for a reporter to work seven days a week and ten hours or more a day.

What a change has come over the scene! Young men and women entering journalism today find conditions of work and salaries regulated by agreements between the newspaper proprietors and the National Union of Journalists.

In London the minimum wage for a reporter or sub-editor of three years' experience employed on a daily or Sunday newspaper is 12 guineas a week, and in the provinces the lowest rate is £7 for a man (or woman) on a weekly in a small town.

In London the agreed working week is five days of forty hours (day and thirty-five hours (night)). In the provinces it is agreed that a journalist is entitled in each successive four-weekly period to six days free from duty of any description and the standard hours over the four-weekly period are recognised as 176 for weekly papers, 168 for evening papers and 160 for morning papers.

The Union has now a membership of approximately 10,000 and a General Benefit Fund of £81,269.

It pays unemployment benefit of £3 a week for eight weeks, £2 a week for eight further weeks, and £1 a week for ten further weeks, a total of £50 over a period of twenty-six weeks. If a member has paid five years' continuous contributions as a full member and has been in full employment for five years, he is entitled to additional benefit at the rate of £1 a week for a further twenty-six weeks, making a total of £76 over a period of twelve months.

A considerable sum is disbursed in benevolent grants to members who have encountered misfortune.

Substantial grants are made from a Widow and Orphan Fund of £79,000.

In 1919 the Union affiliated with the Printing and Kindred Trades Federation, and by this step entered into relations with all the other workers in newspaper production which have remained cordial ever since. This affiliation carried with it participation in the Joint Industrial Council for the printing and newspaper industry which was formed in 1919 and has proved invaluable by reason of its machinery of conciliation.

The National Union of Journalists is justifiably proud of what it has done for working journalists. It does not consider the important bread-and-butter side of its work to be its sole concern. It is conscious that its members are engaged in a great public service and have a high responsibility in conveying honest news to the people.

THE INCORPORATED SOCIETY OF AUTHORS, PLAYWRIGHTS & COMPOSERS

FOUNDED in 1884 by Sir Walter Besant, to represent, assist and protect the rights and interests of authors of every kind of published or unpublished literary, musical or artistic work, the Society has during the past 63 years greatly extended the scope of its original activities, and to-day within the main body of the Society has separate organisations for the Dramatist, Composer and Screenwriter.

Since its foundation the Society has collected a fund of specialized information about such matters as national and international copyright law, the laws of libel and censorship, the commercial value of literary, musical and artistic property, including films, broadcasting and television rights, the standing and reputation of publishers, managers, film companies, and literary agents. On all these and the numerous other matters with which authors are concerned, members of the Society are entitled to receive without extra charge, the best advice obtainable. In addition where members, as a result of their work, become involved in litigation in any part of the world, the Society will conduct the case free, provided the Committee of Management is satisfied that the member's case is sound in law and that the proceedings are justified.

Both the Secretary-General and Secretary of the Society are barristers, and members are advised to forward any contracts to them for comment before publication.

The admission of applicants to membership is in the absolute discretion of the Committee, but as a general rule applicants who have had no full length work accepted for publication by an established publishing firm are admitted to associate membership, whilst applicants who have had no work of any kind accepted are required to defer their applications until they have received an offer of publication from an established editor or publisher.

PUBLICATION OF BOOKS IN BRAILLE FOR THE BLIND

By J. de la Mare Rowley

BRAILLE, the embossed type which can be read by the fingers of the blind, is named after its inventor, Louis Braille, born at Coupvray near Paris, in 1809 and accidentally blinded while at play when he was three years old. From boyhood he was keenly interested in the problems of reading by touch and inclined to be critical of the prevalent embossed line system, dreaming of replacing the lines by dots. He finally evolved his six-dot system in 1834, and it is this system which is now used by the blind throughout the world.

Six dots are used in Braille, arranged like the dots on a domino, in three pairs of two dots. Numbering these dots across—1 and 2, 3 and 4, 5 and 6—dot 1, standing alone, represents A; dots 1 and 2, B; dots 1 and 4, C. The varying combinations of two, three or more dots amount in all to sixty-three, and they are employed to represent the letters of the alphabet, punctuation signs, and frequently used combinations of letters, such as -ed, -tion, dis-, etc.

In 1868, Dr. Thomas Rhodes Armitage, who was obliged to give up practice owing to failing sight, founded, with three other blind men, the British and Foreign Blind Association for Promoting the Education of the Blind, the parent body of the National Institute for the Blind. With his colleagues he undertook the onerous task of ascertaining the best of the embossed codes then in use, and eventually decided in favour of the Braille system. Forthwith, they proceeded to produce school books and classics in Braille. During the following years the Association was engaged in improving the mechanical production of Braille and in persuading blind schools to adopt it. Braille periodicals were started; in 1914 the present headquarters in Great Portland Street were opened by King George V and Queen Mary as the National Institute for the Blind; and today, the Institute is the largest publisher of Braille books in the British Commonwealth. In the year ended 31st March, 1947, it produced 70,000 Braille volumes and pamphlets, 338,000 newspapers, 120,000 magazines and 9,000 volumes and pieces of sheet music. The periodicals range from weekly newspapers and a Braille edition of the "Radio Times" to technical journals for blind physiotherapists and musicians; the books, from the classics to the latest "thrillers"; the music, from full orchestral scores to the dances and songs of the moment.

In 1882 the National Library for the Blind was founded by Miss Howden and Miss Arnold. In its latest report the number of embossed volumes available to readers is shown as 271,660; the year's circulation amounted to 320,400. This library contains a number of copies of all the books published in Braille by the National Institute; in addition, it contains thousands of single copies of other books handwritten in Braille by blind transcribers or voluntary Braille writers. The National Institute also runs a lending library—the Students' Library, devoted exclusively to handwritten copies of books for the use of blind students and all produced by voluntary writers. The number of volumes in the library, after periodical weeding out of obsolete works, is at present 18,000. In the year ended 31st March, 1947, 680 volumes on highly technical subjects, and including works in Greek and Hebrew, were produced and the circulation of books amounted to 4,430 volumes.

Braille can be adapted to all languages and dialects. Great Britain and the United States have evolved a Standard English Braille which enables all books in the English-speaking countries to be interchangeable. Braille Music Notation is an International Code. Braille Shorthand enables a blind stenographer to take dictation at speeds comparable to those of a sighted stenographer.

Braille books are printed from twin metal plates on which the Braille characters have been embossed by means of an electrically-operated transcribing machine. From these plates an edition of any size can be printed, and new editions of some books are still being produced by the Institute from plates embossed thirty or forty years ago.

The production of Braille is costly, mainly because (a) Braille is voluminous, and (b) there is no "commercial" market for Braille. Whereas a letterpress copy of, say, "David Copperfield" is in one volume and can be sold at a profit for 5s., a Braille copy is in twelve volumes costing 6s. 6d. per volume (or £3 18s. complete), and is sold at a loss of 4s. 4d. per volume. To bring Braille books within the reach of the blind purchaser the Institute is obliged to allow a discount of two-thirds on the bare cost price; accordingly, the more books it sells, the more money it loses. The loss is borne by the Institute's voluntary funds, and during the year ended 31st March, 1947, amounted to over £10,000. The sum would be much greater—indeed, the production in Braille of modern literature would be almost impracticable—if the Institute had to pay copyright fees, but these fees are invariably waived by the copyright owners, both authors and publishers, whose generosity enables the blind to enjoy an ample flow of current literature. Several leading publishers have given the Institute a general permission to proceed with Braille editions of all works of which they hold the copyright, but as a rule application for permission is specifically made in respect of each work selected for brailleing. When this is forthcoming, due acknowledgment is made on the title page of every copy of the Braille edition. In some cases publishers have a clause in their agreements with authors which stipulates that permission shall be granted free of charge for Braille editions to be made, and all publishers, authors, literary agents and other owners of copyright are invariably eager to facilitate in every possible way the production of Braille books for the blind.

The question of author's fees does not, therefore, arise in connection with any Braille book or periodical unless an author is specifically commissioned to write something for the publication in Braille. This does not occur often except in the case of blind writers, whose work the Institute tries to encourage.

The Institute's catalogue of current publications—some 2,500 items—shows how wide a field is covered. From the Bible and the great classics of prose and poetry, biographies and histories, essays and anthologies, standard and modern fiction and books for children, to what Lamb described as literature which is not literature—the text-books and the dictionaries, the reference books and the legal and scientific treatises—the list contains something to please every class of reader.

THE NEWSPAPER PRESS FUND

THE Newspaper Press Fund, of which His Majesty the King is Patron, is the oldest benevolent organisation of journalists. It exists to relieve distress among journalists and their dependants throughout the United Kingdom. It makes grants to its members; gives pensions to members and widows of members in need; assists widows left with young children, making provision, if required, for continued education. The total amount disbursed to members and their dependants last year was £22,750. Since the establishment of the Fund in 1864 considerably more than half a million pounds has been expended in grants and pensions, and the claims upon its resources are steadily increasing. Non-members are also assisted to a limited extent.

The Fund derives its income from investments, donations and members' subscriptions, and a minimum annual donation income of £17,000 is needed if assistance is to be continued on its present scale.

THE CENTRAL OFFICE OF INFORMATION

THE Ministry of Information ceased to operate on 31st March, 1946, and the Central Office of Information came into being on 1st April.

The principal difference between the two organisations was that there was no longer a single Minister exclusively concerned with information matters. Ministers were made responsible to Parliament for the information policy of their Departments, and the Central Office was set up to perform certain common technical and production functions and to make specialist publicity services available to all Departments for both home and overseas purposes. Direct contact with the Press reverted also to Departments, and the Postmaster-General resumed responsibility for the Broadcasting vote.

The Central Office is constituted as a non-ministerial Department with a separate vote for which Treasury Ministers are responsible to Parliament. The initiation of publicity and the formulation of publicity policy is the responsibility of the Departmental Minister concerned in each case, though the Central Office has the power to initiate publicity on subjects which are not the concern of any one Department.

Machinery has been set up, under the overall guidance of the Lord President of the Council, to secure the integration of the information policy of the various Departments and to co-ordinate inter-Departmental action both at home and overseas.

The Central Office acts as the central Government agency for the preparation of publicity material. Its output is designed for use both at home and overseas; on balance a little over 50 per cent is used abroad by the Information Offices maintained by the respective Overseas Departments. It is responsible for:—(a) the production and distribution within the United Kingdom and overseas of official films; (b) carrying out Government advertising within the United Kingdom in the press and by posters; (c) designing, producing and managing official exhibitions (apart from trade and art exhibitions) at home and abroad, and British sections in inter-Departmental exhibitions; (d) providing a common editorial service and translation service for books and pamphlets for home and overseas publicity use, published through H.M.S.O.; (e) preparing books, pamphlets, periodicals, digests and feature articles in English and other languages for overseas publicity purposes; (f) maintaining a common service of reference and basic material for the information and publicity use of Press Attachés and Information Officers overseas and for Departments at home; (g) maintaining a central library of photographs and for producing, supplying and distributing general publicity photographs and filmstrips at home and overseas; (h) providing by cable or wireless daily general and regionalised services of background information and comment for overseas posts; (i) stimulating the overseas distribution of commercial books and of periodicals and newspapers which serve the purposes of official publicity; (j) providing machinery for the central issue of Government news at home; (k) maintaining regional offices in England and Wales, charged with the performance of such local functions as the organisation of lectures, exhibitions and film shows, and with responsibility for relations with the local press on behalf of other Departments; (l) supervising the work of the Social Survey.

THE ARTS COUNCIL

By E. W. White, Assistant Secretary

THE Arts Council of Great Britain, which was set up under a Royal Charter dated 9th August, 1946, administers a Treasury grant for the purpose of developing a greater knowledge, understanding and practice of the fine arts, of increasing their accessibility to the public, and of improving their standard of execution. Its chairman and members are appointed by the Chancellor of the Exchequer after consultation with the Minister of Education and the Secretary of State for Scotland. It is assisted by Committees for Scotland and Wales and by Advisory Panels on Music, Drama and the Visual Arts. For the most part, it works in close association with a limited number of approved orchestras, theatre companies and other bodies connected with the fine arts; but there are certain services for the provision of which it makes itself directly responsible, such as pioneer concerts, experimental regional repertory companies and exhibitions of paintings, sculpture and other works of art. It is interested in the question of accommodation for the arts, whether through theatres, concert halls, galleries, or arts centres. The Council is the successor of C.E.M.A. (Council for the Encouragement of Music and the Arts) which was set up with initial backing from the Pilgrim Trust in January, 1940, and, under the chairmanship of Lord Keynes (1942-46), did a wartime emergency job to encourage the arts, with the help of an annual grant-in-aid on the vote of the Ministry of Education.

THE BRITISH COUNCIL

THE British Council is a Government-sponsored body inaugurated in 1935 to represent Britain and the British way of life in all of her many cultural activities. To this end our leading theatrical companies are sent abroad, British periodicals and books are circulated, exhibitions of art and architectural designs are arranged. Concerts of British music are given and many classes and lectures are given on British life and thought in foreign and other cities.

Before the war, work in the United Kingdom was confined to the reception of distinguished visitors and to the award of scholarships enabling students from overseas to attend British centres of learning. During the Second World War the Council gave assistance to the Allied Governments and Committees, and through National Centres provided material, leave courses and other facilities to the Allied and British Overseas Forces and Allied merchant seamen; and in many other ways helped our wartime guests to know and understand the United Kingdom and its people.

The British Council believes that the imaginative and skilful development of popular or cultural relations can, through a system of national interpretation on a reciprocal basis, promote international understanding, friendship and peace. The Council therefore seeks not only to portray Britain to other countries, but encourages other countries to portray themselves to Britain.

It is the ordinary relations—non-political and non-economic—between peoples that are essential to any civilisation. Today there are no longer any "remote" countries, modern science having reduced the distance between nations. It was in the belief that international relations can be improved by a better understanding between peoples of diverse national character and ways of living that the British Council was conceived.

THE DEPARTMENT OF SCIENTIFIC AND INDUSTRIAL RESEARCH

THE above Department, which is the main source of information on a large number of subjects, now has an organisation for supplying data relating to Scientific Research on the following subjects:

|--------------------------------|------------------------------|
| Acoustics | Mathematical and Statistical |
| Aerodynamics | Measurement Standards |
| Atmospheric pollution | Mechanical Engineering |
| Building | Metallurgical |
| Chemical corrosion | Pest infestation |
| Electrical | Radio |
| Fire prevention | Radiology |
| Food, storage and preservation | Road |
| Fuel | Ship design |
| Geological survey | Timber |
| Illumination | Water pollution |

Applications for information and requests for articles, etc., should be addressed, in the first instance, to the Press Officer, Walter Hingston, Dept. of Scientific and Industrial Research, Park House, 24, Rutland Gate, London, S.W.7.

HIS MAJESTY'S STATIONERY OFFICE

Controller: Sir Norman G. Scorgie, C.V.O., C.B.E,

H. M. STATIONERY OFFICE is the British Government publisher and the supply department for all printing, stationery, office requisites, and books required by Government departments.

Government publications fall into two classes. Parliamentary publications include Acts (of which the Controller is the King's Printer), Bills, "Hansard," Command Papers, and House of Commons and House of Lords Papers. The popular terms "White Paper" and "Blue Book" as used for Parliamentary publications have no official significance. Non-Parliamentary publications include all the books, reports, pamphlets, prescribed forms, leaflets and periodicals published at the instance of a Government department for the use or information of the public. The Stationery Office is solely an official publisher and is not in a position to consider private manuscripts, however public-spirited the author's objective.

Government publications can be purchased at the Stationery Office shops in London, Edinburgh, Manchester, Cardiff, Bristol and Belfast, or through any bookseller. Annual, monthly and daily lists of all official publications are obtainable by anyone for a small charge.

Under section 18 of the Copyright Act, 1911, Crown copyright exists (subject to any agreement with the author), in any work which has been prepared or published by or under the direction or control of His Majesty or any Government department, and by Letters Patent all Crown copyright is vested in the Controller of H.M. Stationery Office, so that his permission should be sought for any proposed reproduction from an official publication which exceeds the ordinary limit of quotation permissible without infringement of copyright. Permission is never arbitrarily refused, and subject to acknowledgment is usually given for any normal use of Parliamentary publications without fee. In exceptional cases for those, and generally in regard to non-Parliamentary publications, a moderate reproduction fee, dependent on the nature and extent of the reproduction, will be required.

THE P.E.N.

By Hermon Ould, International Secretary

THE P.E.N. CLUB—sometimes known as the P.E.N.—is a world association of writers, editors and translators in all branches and classes of literature—belles lettres, poetry and drama, fiction, history and biography, science and philosophy. It was founded in 1921 by Mrs. C. A. Dawson Scott, English poet and novelist, and the first President was John Galsworthy. The Association is open to all qualified writers, editors and translators who subscribe to its aims, without regard to nationality, race, colour or religion. Its aim is to promote and maintain friendship and intellectual co-operation between men of letters in all countries in the interests of literature, freedom of expression and international good will. It is not concerned with state or party politics and must not be used to serve their interests.

The Association has passed through several phases since its inception and the sphere of its influence has grown from year to year. In the early days it functioned primarily as a dining club, at which foreign writers were entertained once a month. But this modest beginning was soon left behind, and the Association—which was always intended to be international in its scope—by degrees set up Centres all over the world, among the earliest being New York, Paris, Brussels, Prague and Warsaw. When the war of 1939–45 broke out there were some sixty centres, many of which were, however, the first victims of the Nazi terror. Germany, before Hitler, had possessed active centres of the P.E.N. in Berlin, Hamburg, Munich and Cologne, but it became clear as early as 1933 that the aims of the P.E.N. were incompatible with the aims of Hitler, and at the International Congress in 1933, held in Yugoslavia under the presidency of H. G. Wells, Germany was represented for the last time. Later in the same year the German Centres withdrew from the international organisation.

The only other great country outside the P.E.N. is the U.S.S.R.

International congresses of the P.E.N. are held every year, and usually in a different capital. Those which have taken place to date are as follows :

|---------------|-------------------------|
| 1923. England | 1933. Yugoslavia |
| 1924. U.S.A. | 1934. Scotland |
| 1925. France | 1935. Spain (Catalonia) |
| 1926. Germany | 1936. Argentina |
| 1927. Belgium | 1937. France |
| 1928. Norway | 1938. Czechoslovakia |
| 1929. Austria | 1941. England |
| 1930. Poland | 1946. Sweden |
| 1931. Holland | 1947. Switzerland |
| 1932. Hungary | |

It will be seen there were two gaps during the war years, for obvious reasons. With some difficulty the English Centre organised a Congress in 1941 at which there were representatives of more than thirty countries, and the proceedings were published in a book called "Writers in Freedom," edited by Hermon Ould. It was a remarkable gathering of intellectuals, discussing problems of moment at a time when the world was bent on destroying itself, and it did much to strengthen the morale not only of people in England but of the many groups of foreign writers who had been compelled to flee from their own countries as the Nazi armies conquered one country after another.

During the period when flying bombs were making life in London a hazardous and nerve-trying adventure the P.E.N. organised another important conference to celebrate the tercentenary of the publication of that great plea for freedom of expression, John Milton's Areopagitica. This conference lasted five days, in August, 1944, under the presidency of Mr. E. M. Forster, and an unusually distinguished assembly of public men—writers, scientists, philosophers, religious leaders—discussed "The Place of Spiritual and Economic Values in the Future of Mankind"—their papers being collected subsequently in a volume entitled "Freedom of Expression," edited by Hermon Ould. The proceedings were made the more exciting by the bombs, which, on the morning the conference opened, narrowly missed the Institut Français in South Kensington, where the conference was held. Much damage was done, but not enough to prevent the meetings taking place.

A word about the officers. On the death of John Galsworthy the International Presidency was assumed by H. G. Wells, and in 1936 by M. Jules Romains. With the outbreak of war, however, the office of International Presidency was in abeyance, the Presidential Committee taking its place. In 1947 the office was again filled, this time by the great Belgian writer, Maurice Maeterlinck. The International Secretary is Hermon Ould, who has occupied the office since its creation in 1926. The Presidents of the English Centre have been John Galsworthy, H. G. Wells, J. B. Priestley, Henry W. Nevinson, Storm Jameson and Desmond MacCarthy, who was re-elected in 1947. The Honorary Member for England is Mr. W. Somerset Maugham.

Centres are autonomous and membership of one is regarded as membership of all. The English Centre meets at least once a month, at lectures, dinners, luncheons, conferences, discussions, poetry readings, etc., the nature of the meeting being dictated by circumstances.

The Charter of the P.E.N., to which all members are required to subscribe may be summarised as follows :

The P.E.N. Club affirms that :

1. Literature, national though it be in origin, knows no frontiers, and should remain common currency between nations in spite of political or international upheavals.
2. In all circumstances, and particularly in time of war, works of art, the patrimony of humanity at large, should be left untouched by national or political passion.
3. Members of the P.E.N. should at all times use what influence they have in favour of good understanding and mutual respect between nations ; they pledge themselves to do their utmost to dispel race, class and national hatreds and to champion the ideal of one humanity living in peace in one world.
4. The P.E.N. stands for the principle of unhampered transmission of thought within each nation and between all nations, and members pledge themselves to oppose any form of suppression of freedom of expression in the country and community to which they belong. The P.E.N. declares for a free press and opposes arbitrary censorship in time of peace. It believes that the necessary advance of the world towards a more highly organised political and economic order renders a free criticism of administrations and institutions imperative. And since freedom implies voluntary restraint, members pledge themselves to oppose such evils of a free press as mendacious publication, deliberate falsehood and distortion of facts for political and personal ends.

THE ROYAL SOCIETY OF LONDON

THE Royal Society of London for improving Natural Knowledge was founded by King Charles II, who granted its first Charter in 1662.

The Society had its origins in the time of the Civil War when a group was formed by the professors at Gresham College and their acquaintances. The first meetings were held in one of the professor's rooms at the College in 1645. Three years afterwards some of the company moved to Oxford and there formed a similar society, while those who remained in London continued to meet in their accustomed manner. By 1660 the London group had been joined by those from Oxford and the first meeting of the new society was held on 28th November, 1660. At this meeting certain procedure was adopted and a regular subscription was agreed upon. Meetings have been held regularly since that date and the Society has had a continuous existence. Its object is, as stated in the title, the promotion of natural knowledge. Twenty-five Fellows are now elected annually. The Fellowship at the present time numbers 475 and there are fifty Foreign Members. Apart from occasional publications the Society publishes:—Philosophical Transactions, Series A (Physical Sciences), Series B (Biological Sciences); Proceedings, Series A (Physical Sciences), Series B (Biological Sciences); an annual Year Book containing a List of Fellows, the Statutes of the Society and particulars regarding committees, funds, etc.; Notes and Records, which gives details of the activities of the Society and historical and biographical data. A volume of Obituary Notices of Fellows of the Royal Society appears in November each year. The Society possesses a valuable library, which, in addition to many incunabulæ, includes one of the most complete collections of publications of scientific academies and societies of the world. Its archives contain 100,000 manuscripts and 200,000 original letters.

THE BRITISH ACADEMY

THE British Academy was founded on 17th December, 1901, to meet the need for some official body to represent the country at international conferences or other gatherings in respect of humanistic studies. It was granted a Royal Charter on 8th August, 1902, as "The British Academy for the Promotion of Historical, Philosophical and Philological Studies." The general objects are the encouragement of humanistic studies by the administration of such funds as may be placed at its disposal, or otherwise, and the giving of advice to H.M. Government, if desired, on matters coming within its scope. The maximum number of Fellows was originally fixed at 100, of whom forty-nine were nominated in the Charter; subsequently this was increased to 150, and quite recently power has been granted to raise it by stages to 175. Elections take place annually in July, based upon recommendations made by the Sections in April. Candidates have to be nominated by not less than three Fellows of the Academy.

The Academy receives a Government grant, at present, of £2,500, and was at first divided into four Sections, now increased to ten, viz.:—(1) Ancient History; (2) Mediæval and Modern History; (3) Biblical and Ecclesiastical History and Theology; (4) Oriental Studies; (5) Literature and Philology, Classical; (6) Literature and Philology, Mediæval and Modern; (7) Philosophy; (8) Jurisprudence; (9) Economic and Social Science; (10) Archæology and History of Art. As in the case of nearly all academies abroad, pure literature does not come within its scope, except as a subject for scholarly study.

THE SCIENCE MUSEUM AND SCIENCE MUSEUM LIBRARY xxxi

The Academy administers ten lectures endowed by private benefactors, of which the most important are the Schweich Lectures, a course of three lectures delivered annually on subjects connected with Biblical literature and archaeology, and subsequently published in volume form. The other lectures are issued separately in pamphlet form, and also are included in the annual volumes of Proceedings. The Academy has also issued a series of nine volumes of Social and Economic Records, and various Supplemental Papers and other volumes.

Certain prizes are also administered, such as the Serena Medal (for Italian studies), the Burkitt Medal (Biblical studies), Sir Israel Gollancz Prize (English studies), the Cromer Prize for an essay on some approved subject connected with Greece (for candidates under twenty-six years of age), and the Rose Mary Crawshay Prize for a work by a woman on English literature (preferably connected with Keats, Shelley or Byron).

THE SCIENCE MUSEUM

THE Science Museum is the National Museum of Science and Industry and aims at illustrating, by its collections, the applications of science—mathematical, physical and chemical—to the various branches of technology and industry. The collections are arranged in the following main groups :—Industrial Machinery and Manufactures ; Mechanical and Civil Engineering ; Land, Water and Air Transport ; Physics and Geophysics ; Photography, Astronomy, Optics, Mathematics and Chemistry. It is open free to the public from 10.0 a.m. to 6.0 p.m. on weekdays and from 2.30 p.m. to 6.0 p.m. on Sundays.

THE SCIENCE MUSEUM LIBRARY

THE Science Museum Library is a national library especially devoted to pure and applied science. It is open free to the public, practically without restriction, from 10.0 a.m. to 5.50 p.m. on weekdays. Admission is by ticket, to be obtained by application addressed to : The Director, Science Museum, South Kensington, London, S.W.7, or by personal application to the Keeper of the Library.
